More than 4,000 images from the collection Drawings & Prints are now available online. Hundreds of geographical maps, architectural drawings, artistic views, floor plans, elevations, cemetery maps, engineering plans, land surveys, nautical charts, artist’s sketchbooks, portraits, and students sketches are included in this collection. This collection offers a unique visual record of Moravian activity in North America since its beginnings in the 1740s.

Most of the items in this collection are related to Moravian work in North America, in Europe, and in other parts of the world. Because of their size and nature the items were housed separate from the other documents and combined into a separate collection. The first time we learn about maps in the Bethlehem archives is in 1754 when Spangenberg, leader of Moravian work in North America, returned from England and brought a “bundle of maps” that was to be added to the existing map collection in the archives. These maps were for “common use” by members of the congregation. Over the past 265 years, this collection has grown to more than 4,000 items.

During recent months, Jonathan Ennis, digitization assistant at the Moravian Archives, has digitized each item in the collection Drawings & Prints. He provided the items with the appropriate metadata, and linked them to the existing catalog records. Some of the architectural drawings are so large that they do not fit on the scanner. These were scanned in parts and stitched together afterwards.

“The Archives is committed to making collections accessible to the public,” stated archivist Paul Peucker. “Digitization is a wonderful way to accomplish this.” Many people will find it useful to have online access to the collection of Drawings & Prints. Some people use the material for their research. Others will enjoy–browsing through the collection.

The images are all available at a resolution of 200 dpi. This is sufficient for studying most of the details. If someone needs a higher resolution, better quality digital files can be ordered from the Archives. All images in the online finding aid are watermarked with the web address of the Moravian Archives.

The online finding aid is a specialized search tool. In order to make it easier for our users to find their way around the online finding aid, we created several instructional videos. The online finding aid can be found in the Research Our Holdings section of our website.
Intern Spotlight: Eric Ebner

Hello Friends of the Archives, my name is Eric Ebner. I live in Bethlehem, PA, and I am a graduate student at Johns Hopkins University (JHU) studying Museum Studies with a concentration in Digital Curation. I first learned of the Moravian Archives work on digitizing its holdings through Kristen Walsh, Director of Development at Historic Bethlehem. After hearing of MAB's newest project, I was excited to contact the institution and hear of their current digital curation plan.

Since January 2019 I have been working at the Archives as an intern to fulfill a course requirement towards earning a certificate in digital curation through JHU. Currently, I am working closely with Archives’ staff on my final project to create resources that will be a part of the MAB’s digital curation plan. In addition to assisting in crafting a digital curation plan, I have successfully cataloged the congregational records of Port Washington Moravian Church, OH, and I have also assisted in the systemic digitization of the MAB’s collection of drawings and prints which are now newly available online through the MAB’s website.

Hello, my name is Donald Reynolds and I am currently a junior at Moravian College. I am pursuing a career as a high school history teacher. As I have been on this journey, I have taken a few history classes that provided me with the opportunity to volunteer and get involved at the Moravian Archives. I have been fortunate that my time volunteering has led to the opportunity to have an internship here and I have gained valuable experience and advice from the staff. I have also recently taken a position as the circulation assistant at the Moravian Archives. This position entails keeping track of items researchers use and take out of the vault, as well as returning them when finished. I also have been working on the Moravian Roots project by recording baptisms from the First Moravian Church in West Salem, IL. My time at the Moravian Archives has been so valuable and grown my abilities in history. I cannot thank the Moravian Archives enough for giving me this opportunity and I look forward to using my experience in my future as a teacher.

Single Brothers’ Diary Translation Available

Friday, May 9: 12 light cavalry men, who had ridden here to greet Lady Washington, stayed here several days, awaiting her arrival. But later word came that she had gone to Philadelphia via Durham Road.

Translated excerpts from the diary of the Bethlehem Single Brothers’ Choir, like the one above, are now available online. Excerpted entries span the years 1742-1804. The translator, the late Mrs. Grethe J. Goodwin, translated excerpts from the original diary volumes in the late 1950s. MAB received these translations in 2010, courtesy of Historic Bethlehem Museums & Sites.

Interested researchers can access the typewritten translations by visiting: www.moravianchurcharchives.org/research/translations/.

A Celebration of Dr. Paul Peucker

The first day of March this year marked the 15th anniversary of the leadership of the Moravian Archives in Bethlehem by Dr. Paul Peucker. The Board of Directors, recognizing his many and varied contributions to our organization, voted unanimously to celebrate, congratulate, and thank Dr. Peucker at an event held in the afternoon of April 22, 2019 in the Reading Room of the Archives.

One hundred guests were welcomed by the music of the Bethlehem Area Moravian Trombone choir and subsequently presented with tributes offered by Dr. Craig Atwood, Moravian Theological Seminary; Dr. Scott Gordon, Lehigh University; and Dr. Katherine Faull, Bucknell University.

The speakers mentioned an increase in worldwide interest in the Archives by researchers, significant improvements to the physical facility, the introduction of technology, and the digitization of records. Paul was praised for his ability to secure sizeable grants from NEH and other sources. In addition to his administrative duties Paul is recognized as a leading authority and scholar, especially of Moravian History of the 18th century, and at the same time he was acknowledged for contributing greatly to the scholarship of others. It was noted that Paul is the editor of the highly regarded peer-reviewed Journal of Moravian History, which enhances the outreach of the Archives.

As a remembrance, Paul was given a book, hand crafted by Dee Collins, containing guest signatures and a compendium of comments and words of congratulations from attendees and friends both here and around the world.

In addition, an announcement was made of the Board’s decision to establish the Dr. Paul M. Peucker Discretionary Fund which has already received contributions and will be available for continued donations in the future.

The event concluded with time for socializing and enjoying refreshments, including Moravian sugar cake.

The Board of Directors, the many associates, and the friends of Dr. Peucker wish him continued success and many more years of superb leadership here at the Moravian Archives.

Zinzendorf Portrait Donated to the Archives

In recent years the Painting Collection of the Moravian Archives has been growing steadily through gifts and donations. In November of 2018 we received an especially important oil painting: a portrait of Nikolaus Ludwig von Zinzendorf (1700–1760). Zinzendorf not only founded the Renewed Moravian Church, he organized the Moravian Church in North America and gave Bethlehem its name.

The newly-acquired portrait was handed down among descendants of Zinzendorf and we first heard about its existence when the owners of the painting came to visit the Moravian Archives in December of 2015. When Barbara Wood Borne and her sister Susan Wood came to Bethlehem to donate items from the de Schweinitz family they showed us the portrait of Count Zinzendorf they had in their family. Three years later they came back and donated the portrait to the Archives.

The portrait shows Zinzendorf with rosy cheeks, smiling friendly at the viewer while wearing a brown coat and a dark red bishop’s cap. Because of its relatively small size (11 x 7 inches) the portrait has an intimate feel to it. The painting is unsigned but there are clues about the name of the artist. The Unity Archives in Herrnhut, Germany, owns a similar portrait that appears to be a copy. On the copy the name of the artist is identified as “Krügelstein.” Christian Ludwig Krügelstein (1736–1779) grew up in the Moravian Church and was an apprentice of German-Danish portrait painter Johann Georg Ziesenis (1716–1776). Krügelstein served as a missionary at New Herrnhut on St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands, from 1776 until his early death on September 28, 1779.

The Moravian Archives holds other items from the Zinzendorf family in its collection: the table silver Zinzendorf and his wife Erdmuth received for their wedding in 1722, Zinzendorf’s personal Bible, and a painting showing Zinzendorf as a three-year-old boy together with his parents. These were brought to America by descendants of the Zinzendorfs. Zinzendorf’s granddaughter Anna Dorothea Elisabeth von Waterville married Hans Christian Alexander von Schweinitz; many of their descendants served in the Moravian Church in America. Mary de Schweinitz Wood was the mother of the donors of the Zinzendorf portrait. Barbara Wood Borne and Susan Wood claim Count Zinzendorf and his wife Erdmuth as their six times great grandparents.

Are you thinking about donating a painting or other material to the Moravian Archives? Let us know and we’d love to talk to you!

Caribbean Archives Reader

In November 2018, a chapter written by Paul Peucker and Thomas McCullough, was published in Decolonizing the Caribbean Record: An Archives Reader, edited by Jeannette A. Bastian, John A. Aarons, and Stanley H. Griffin. The featured chapter, titled “Records of the Moravian Church in the Caribbean,” sheds light on denominational archives and their value to Caribbean studies and the humanities in general. This article coincides with current MAB grant projects funded by the Council on Library and Information Resources (CLIR) and the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), which both focus on digitization and preservation of the Eastern West Indies Collection at the MAB.
