

Rights, Ethics and Re-use StatementUncommon Bonds: Labrador Inuit and Moravian Missionaries

The Moravian Archives, Bethlehem (MAB), and its partners are committed to supporting research, teaching, and scholarship in their mission to preserve and provide access to the records of the Moravian Church in North America. To that end, the MAB makes freely available digital surrogates of local, national, and international origin and interest. These resources include digitized manuscripts, online catalogs, and descriptive metadata. These resources are made available for individual educational and research purposes. The MAB, and its partners, do not assert any copyright claims over the material to be digitized, and users do not need to seek permission to make use of the digital copies. Digital copies will not contain watermarks.

The MAB, to the best of its knowledge, believes that this digital representation of the Labrador Mission Stations collection is in the public domain. Likewise, the MAB believes that this digital representation of printed materials from the MAB Library are in the public domain under the provisions of the 1976 US Copyright Act.

We suggest that citations of this digital content contain the following information: [identification of the item], Moravian Archives, Bethlehem) in order to aid discoverability for future users.

Most of the records do not contain personal information more recent than 72 years, a rule used by the US government for releasing census records for public access. For any records that fall outside of this timeframe, we will draw on the project's Advisory Committee to help address any moral or ethical concerns about the digital representation of the Labrador Missions collection. Any potential issues of cultural sensitivity will be assessed and addressed by the project's Advisory Committee, which will include Labrador Inuit representatives from both the Nunatsiavut Government and the Moravian Church in Newfoundland and Labrador as well as Ms. Anita Kora, the Librarian-Archivist for Inuit Tapiriit Kanatami. The Advisory Committee will also provide quarterly updates to the Nunatsiavut Government Advisory Committee (NGRAC) on its work and seek input from this body as needed.
